Dear _____:

This is the kind of letter we deeply regret sending you. Unfortunately, there has been an incident that resulted in some of your personal information mistakenly sent outside of the company. First and foremost, we want to share with you that we have no reason to believe your information is at risk for identity theft. We have taken steps to address the incident and, as a precaution, are offering you free credit monitoring services.

Here's what happened. On November 17, 2014, a Quest Diagnostics employee inadvertently sent a standard report via secured email to two individuals from outside companies with whom we have a business relationship. The document contained personal information about Quest employees and their spouses/partners who started or completed the Wellness questionnaire; made an appointment or were a walk in at a PSC for their lab draw; or, had their lab work completed from October 8, 2014 to November 15, 2014. Please note the document did not contain any test results or medical information. The information included some or all of the following information: your name, address, Social Security number, date of birth, Quest Diagnostics employee ID number (if you are a company employee), and any email address you provided when you registered.

While the incident was reported to the company on November 21, 2014, management was not notified until December 11, 2014. Upon notification, we immediately took several actions to address the incident:

- We determined the parties that received the files are individuals in roles of routinely handling confidential personal records at their respective companies.
- The companies have confirmed that the information was not sent beyond the two initial recipients at the two companies nor further disclosed to any other individuals or companies. They also advised that it was deleted from any active systems.

Quest Diagnostics takes information security very seriously. Electronic protections will be added to our systems and processes over the next several weeks. We are reviewing our processes and training procedures to minimize the risk of a similar incident in the future and will take appropriate action pending the outcome of our review. Additionally, we have notified the appropriate authorities of this incident, which may include consumer reporting agencies, attorneys general and/or state police, in accordance with applicable laws.

Even though we believe the exposure of your information to be limited, we are offering credit monitoring services with Experian for one year at no cost to you. The enclosed fact sheet outlines this product and how to enroll, and provides additional information about identity theft protection. To take advantage of this offer, please enroll by March 31, 2015.

We deeply regret and apologize for this incident. If you have any questions, please contact Experian at (877) 736-4495 (Monday to Friday 9am to 9pm EST, Saturday and Sunday 11am to 8pm EST), or if you are an employee please contact the Human Resources Service Center at 855-411-8511 (Monday to Friday, 8am to 8pm EST).

Sincerely,

Catherine T. Doherty
